Customer Reviews

The concept for this book is excellent. This is a great way to teach your kids Spanish--and to learn it if you don't already know it. I started learning Spanish on my own when I was 9-10 years old, studied it as soon as it was available in 9th grade, and eventually majored in it in college. When my first child was about 18 months old, I started teaching him Spanish words he already knew in English, such as eye, ear, mouth, etc. After a few months, I gave up because it was so tiring. Maybe if I had done it the way Carolyn Woods suggests, I would have stuck with it and he would have easily learned Spanish--or at least a lot more--from me. However, be careful with the pronunciations the author has given and some of the vocabulary. It's a lot easier to learn it correctly the first time than to have to relearn it correctly later. Wrong Pronunciations: * She should have used [lah] for la; otherwise people could pronounce it lots of different ways; she assumes people already know how to pronounce la. * chaqueta [la cha-key-tah] should be [lah cha-keh-tah] * huevos [hway-vose] should be [hweh-vose] * tocino [toe-key-no] should be [toe-see-no] * pan [pan] should be [pahn] She frequently gets the pronunciation of i and e wrong. Other Problems: I realize that the author is trying to keep it simple. But here are some other problems: * For most of the colors, she didn't give both masculine & feminine words, except for blanco/blanca & rojo/roja; this could be confusing for new learners. * She didn't explain that emphasis should be on the accented syllable, e.g.
